Valuable Horse Died of Blood Poisoning.

Merchants' Picnic Is Attended by 400 People.

Society Girls Are Camping at State Mill—Barberton News.

(Special Correspondence.)

Barberton, Aug. 1.—Mrs. Mary Chrysolmes this morning withdrew the charge of criminal assault preferred by her in Mayor McNamara's court against an Akron insurance agent. She admitted that the details in the affidavit were incorrect.

Instead, the agent was charged with assault and he pleaded guilty. He was fined $5 and costs.

Almost 400 people left for Chippewa lake at 8 o'clock this morning, via the Erie, to participate in the Merchants' fourth annual picnic.

A valuable sorrel horse, owned by Al Cox, died of blood poisoning. The disease was caused by a rusty nail in the horse's neck. The nail was not discovered until the horse was almost dead. Mr. Cox recently refused an offer of $300 for the steed.

All He Wanted to Know.

"There's just one thing that I want to know," said the young man.

"Only one?" asked the self satisfied old fellow.

"Only one," repeated the young man.

"Well, you're easily suited. What is it?"

"What is the reason that the great international troubles—the affairs that we most want to discuss—always crop out in the places that have the most unpronounceable names?"—Chicago Post.

A Poor Creature.

Maude—Sed is a clever fellow. When Chicago gas went down the other day, he took advantage of the opportunity afforded him and cleared a good round sum.

The Mistake.

"So you are the people who discovered gunpowder," exclaimed the foreigner.

"We are," answered the Chinaman.

"Where was it made?" the mistake was in not following a method which obtains among some modern manufacturers.

We ought to have bought up all the patents pertaining to the invention and then suppressed them so that people would have to go on fighting in the old way.—Washington Star.

He Met His Match.

Grocer—Flour has gone up, Mrs. Tiggs. The wheat crop's a failure, you know.

Mrs. Tiggs—Oh, you can't come that over me! I read in the paper this morning that there are still 45,000,000 bushels of wheat in the public granaries of America. Give me a nickel's worth of cornmeal.—Indianapolis Journal.

Shattering the Commandments.

During an interval of several minutes the editor and the poet contemplated each other with implacable fury.

"This is a poem on spring, I presume," sneered the editor at last.

"Not only on spring, but on both sides of the paper as well!" shrieked the poet defiantly.

Here the editor rose and clutched the fellow by the throat, frothing at the mouth the while. Detroit Journal.

UNCLE ELI'S FABLES.

The Story of the Wizard and the Unhappy Hare.

As the Wizard was passing through the forest one day the Hare put herself in his path and said:

"O Wizard, I am pursued by the Fox, hunted down by the Dog and followed by the Peasant! I pray thee change me into some other animal."

"Yes; you do have a pretty hard time of it," replied the Wizard, "and I'll grant your prayer. Will it suit you to become a Fox?"

"I could ask for nothing better."

The change was made, and the Fox expressed his everlasting gratitude and ed when he sought out the Wizard and said:

"O my good friend, I am hunted by hounds, chased by wolves, ambushed by bears and pursued by mobs of men, and every way I turn I find a trap set for me! Take pity and change me back to a Hare again."

Moral—"Just as you say," replied the Wizard, "but let this be a lesson to you. Things may be hard in our line of trade, but at the same time they can be worse in the other fellow's."

Definition of "Bossism."

"You said you didn't believe in political bosses," suggested the voter.

"True," replied the politician.

"And yet I know of no one more autocratic than you, so one more ready to override the will of the majority whenever opportunity offers. What do you call 'bossism,' anyway?"

"Bossism," answered the politician, "is dictation by some one else. If you ever get very deep in politics, you will readily understand it."—Chicago Post.
